

EVIDENCE CHECKLIST

DisputeVoice is built for one thing: turning what happened to you into a single, clear, searchable report that actually shows up when people look up a person, company, or organization by name. Instead of your story getting buried in scattered Google reviews, Facebook groups, Reddit threads, or Yelp comments, DisputeVoice puts your evidence and experience in one place designed to be found when it matters most.

What sets DisputeVoice apart is that every report is grounded in real evidence, not just vague complaints. Use this checklist to gather the documents, messages, and screenshots that show what happened, so your warning is clear, credible, and easy for others to trust. <https://disputevoice.com>

Reminder:

You do not need every item above. For a strong report, try to have at least:

- Something showing what was promised (contract, estimate, messages),
- Something showing what you paid, and
- Something showing what went wrong (photos, messages, inspector/contractor opinion).

Everything else simply makes your warning clearer and more credible.

Core Documents (Most Helpful)

- Signed contract or work agreement
- Written estimate/proposal/bid
- Any change orders or add-on agreements
- Warranty or guarantee documents
- Contractor's business card, website printout, or ad you responded to

Payments & Money Trail

- Invoices and receipts from the contractor
- Bank / credit-card statements showing payments
- Canceled checks or check images
- Zelle, Venmo, Cash App, PayPal, or other payment screenshots
- Financing / loan documents (if you financed the project)
- Any refund or partial refund documentation

Messages & Communications

- Text messages with the contractor (screenshots or exports)
- Emails to/from the contractor
- Messages through apps (Facebook, WhatsApp, Thumbtack, Angi, etc.)
- Voicemail recordings or voicemail transcriptions
- Written promises about timelines, scope, or "I'll be there on..."

Photos & Video of the Project

- "Before" photos of your home or project area
- "During" photos showing work in progress
- "After" photos showing unfinished, poor, or damaged work
- Photos or videos of safety issues (exposed wires, leaks, etc.)
- Photos of materials delivered (or promised but missing)

Project & Permit Records

- Copies or screenshots of permits (if any)
- City or county permit lookup results (if you checked and found no permit)
- Inspection reports or correction notices
- Signed walkthrough notes or punch lists
- Any schedule or timeline the contractor provided

Other People & Professional Opinions

- Written estimates from a new contractor to fix or finish the job
- Written opinion that previous work is unsafe, not to code, or must be redone
- Home inspector's report
- Statements from neighbors or witnesses (even simple emails/texts)

Your Own Notes & Timeline

- A simple date list: when you hired them, when they started, when they stopped
- Notes of missed appointments / "no-shows"
- Notes of key conversations ("On April 12, he promised to finish by Friday...")

Extra Helpful Items (Nice, But Not Required)

- Screenshots of the contractor's online reviews or ads that influenced you
- Social media posts or messages from the contractor
- Any complaints already filed (BBB, attorney general, licensing board, etc.)
- Police report or insurance claim (if one exists)
